Benefits 101

Life Insurance and Disability Insurance

Life insurance and disability insurance are great added benefits when considering your future. Each has different purposes and covers different risks, but they both offer valuable financial protection and peace of mind for you and your family.

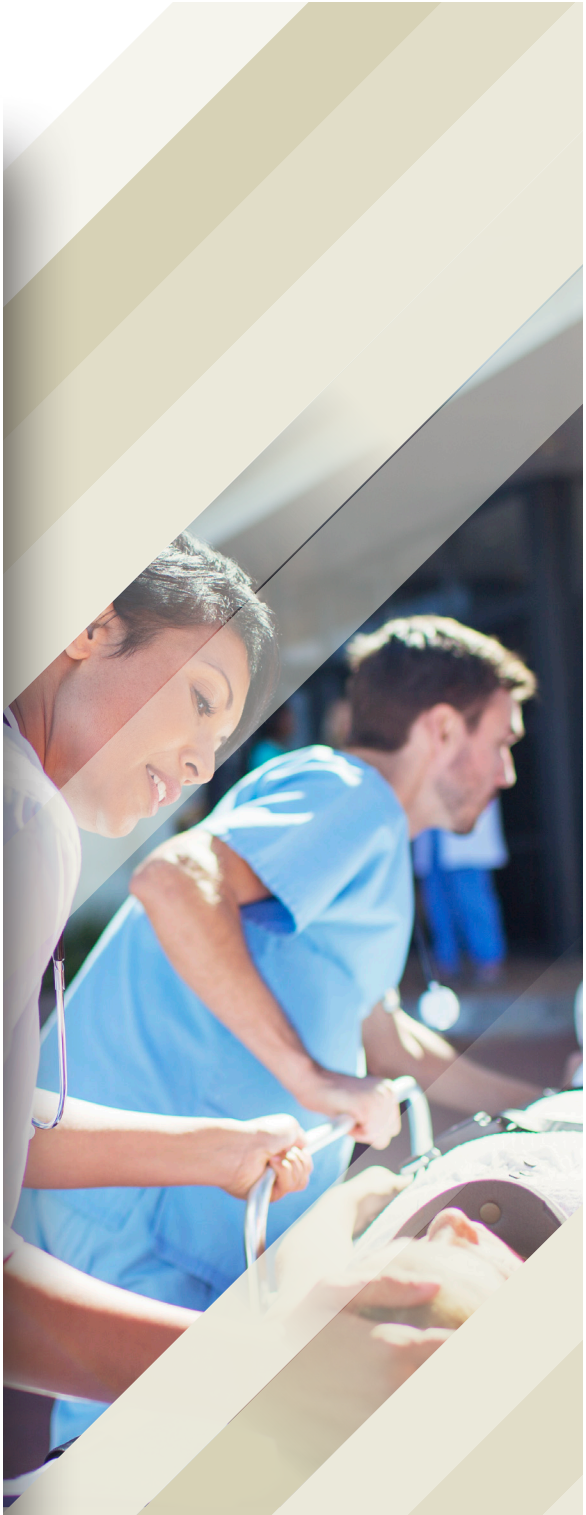

Think about this: are you financially prepared if something happens to you and you're suddenly gone? Life insurance can protect your loved ones from devastating financial loss. It can help cover things like funeral costs, living expenses, and outstanding debt. It can also provide your family with financial safety nets.

Life insurance is a must-have. It can ease your worries and protect your family.

The same can also be said for disability insurance. When an unexpected accident happens, it can leave you unable to work and receive your income, so it's important to have a plan in place in case that ever happens.

Did you know you have a 1 in 4 chance of becoming disabled and losing income before you reach retirement age? Why wouldn't you want to protect yourself? Accidents or illnesses can happen to anyone, and disability insurance can protect your income.

It's important to think about life and disability insurance if you're looking to secure your financial future. Investing in the right type of insurance can provide valuable protection for you and your family.
